Amy Rubin splits her time between transactional work, cannabis law, and commercial litigation involving energy-related matters and business disputes. She also advises clients on real estate issues and helps clients navigate the complex regulatory and compliance framework in the energy and cannabis industries.

As a champion for public service and public education, Amy was elected to the Clayton School District Board of Education in 2015 and re-elected in 2018.

In 2005, she founded St. Louis Title, which she helped grow into one of the premier commercial closing operations in the St. Louis area.
